CITY OF CAMBRIDGE Census 2000 Demographic Atlas

NOTES:

1. All map data points are rounded to fit the ranges displayed. For example, for the map entitled "Cambridge population density," a census tract that has a population density of 17.4 persons per acre would be included in the range 8 - 17, while a census tract that has a population density of 17.7 would be included under the range 18 - 26.
2. Only publicly-owned open space parcels measuring 150,000 square feet or more of space are displayed on the maps.
3. A map depicting the census tract boundaries in relation to the street layout with full street name annotation can be found at <http://gis.ci.cambridge.ma.us/maplibrary/index.html>.
4. The Census Bureau uses the terms "Hispanic origin," "Spanish" and "Latino" interchangeably.
5. As defined by the Census Bureau, the term "origin" (employed in the maps "Percentage Hispanic origin" and "Hispanic population by specific origin") refers to the heritage, nationality group, lineage or country of birth of the census subject or the census subject's parents or ancestors before their arrival in the United States.

SOURCES:

All statistical data is from the United States Census Bureau's Summary File 1 (SF1) from the 2000 U.S. Census, downloadable at <http://www.census.gov/>. SF1 contains data on age, sex, households, families, and housing units. These data are based on answers to the questions common to both the Census 2000 Short Form and Long Form questionnaires. Other data such as economic characteristics are not included in SF1. The census tables referenced in the table of contents refer to the specific data tables within SF1 that serve as the data source for each map.

All geospatial data, such as hydrographic data, political boundaries and street grids, are from the City of Cambridge GIS.
